The Best Of Art & Artists In 2011

POSTED: 12/29/2011

Over the past few days, I've had a lot of fun compiling those end-of-the-year articles, where we've covered, lists of all lists in 2011, most popular e-scientists' finds, most innovative products of 2011, and top trends revealed by Facebook, Twitter & Google.

But I must say that it took me the longest creating this particular list, not because it was difficult or time consuming. Only because these amazing artists and their art has the power to consume you. I got so engrossed in browsing through their art and their interviews that I almost forgot about this post.

Through E-junkie.info, we've had the opportunity to interact with some truly talented artists and a chance to learn so many different forms of art. Their originality leaves you spellbound. So, have a look at some of the best artists and art featured on E-junkie.info in 2011:

Top 10 Artists

Ben Heine: Pencil vs. Camera

Ben is a painter, illustrator, portraitist, caricaturist, photographer and former activist who has studied Journalism, graphic arts and sculpture...but above all, he's a truly talented artist. His Pencil Vs Camera series has gained much deserved appreciation and is known for its poetic mix of reality and imagination. (Learn More)

Start-Up Of The Week: AIZA, Elegant Designer Furniture With Indian Essence By Ipsita Johri

Sienna Morris is a dexterous and blessed artist who invented this wonderful technique called 'Numberism'. Based in Portland, Oregon, she has been a painter and designer for most of her life. But in summer of 2008, she started creating drawings with the numbers of the clock 1-12. The idea behind using the numbers is quite interesting. For Sienna, her creations are a medium to appreciate the present and it is the only chance to do so. (Learn More)

Angelo Musco: Photographic Portraits Created From Uncountable Nude Human Bodies

Angelo Musco is an Italian contemporary artist based in New York. He creates other-worldly photographic portraits of thousands of nude bodies. One of his biggest pieces, Tehom, remarkably used around 200,000 nude bodies. The theme of these astounding portraits revolve around the sensitive topics like birth, gestation and procreation. The human body is the main subject of his work in which the naked bodies are connected to each other in a surreal manner. The artist also draws influence from his early tragic life. Debbie Goard: An Exceptional Cake Sculptor

Debbie Goard is an extremely talented artist from Oakland, who specializes in making sculpted cakes. Her cakes appear so realistic that it becomes difficult to believe if they are actually cakes. Not only that, the variety in the design of her cakes is really wide; from animals to games, transport to fashion, characters to food & drinks and whatever you can think of. Debbie has a booming fan base and why not? After all, she has been doing a wonderful job in sculpting cakes since 22 long years. (Learn More)

Megan Coyle: Creates Beautiful Collage Paintings Using Only Magazine Strips

Megan Coyle's beautiful artworks appear as if they are created with brush strokes. But actually they are collages using handpicked magazine strips that looks like paintings. The most amazing part of her creations is choosing the right colored pieces of paper and placing them accurately; giving them a look of a real painting. And trust me, it's hard to distinguish! Juan Osborne: Creates Intricate and Detailed Portraits From Words

Juan Osborne is an artist who creates incredible text portraits and images with as many 200,000 words. The Spanish artist picks words from speeches, books and other sources that are linked with the subject of his image. The most intriguing aspect of Juan's artwork is that he uses self invented software to carry out his creative work process and it is certainly not a child play. What he is doing requires not only basic attributes like love, dedication, practice, labor, etc., but requires every quality that an artist possess. (Learn More)

Neraldo & Alian: Creating Sculptural Artwork Out Of Discarded Clothing

Guerra De La Paz is the combined name of two Miami-based artists Alain Guerra and Neraldo de le Paz. They create sculptural artworks out of discarded clothing. Each series of their work has some message and a definite meaning. The duo gives a new life to the trash clothing. "Through a common aesthetic, we create work with a universal message. Using recycled objects our medium and the guidance of the unrelenting amounts of information that fuels today's mass consciousness and it's subversive parallels", share the artists.
